ON THEIR TOES

Some of the world's best male dancers take the stage in the fifteenth installment of Men Dancing, a mixed repertory program covering a broad range of dance styles, techniques, and traditions. Dancers from Brazil, Peru, and the United States perform three nights of modern dance, ballet, and Hawaiian hula.

Men Dancing started sixteen years ago, the brainchild of choreographer and producer Gary Palmer of the San José Dance Theater. The show, which strives to liberate dance from its common stereotype as a purely female art form, has won Palmer the Isadora Duncan Award, and has been imitated in cities throughout the country. Over the years, Palmer's show has brought the diversity of world dance styles to Bay Area audiences: flamenco, classical ballet, Native American fancy dance, and South Indian bharata natyam.

In addition to spawning this long-running program, Palmer is director and choreographer for the Gary Palmer Dance Company, and the creative mind behind Open Stage and the 3x3 Solo Dance Series.

Featured guest artists this year are Never Navarro Aguilar and Enrique Olaechea, both of El Ballet Nacional del Perú. Both participated in Palmer's North American debut of Blue Lizard Highway in 1997. Also from South America is Marcelo Pereira of Brazil Dance Revue.

Bay Area participants include Hawaiian hula dancer/choreographer Patrick Makuakane, whose company Na Lei Hulu I Ka Wekiu is a Fort Mason regular, and Michael Kruzich of Smuin Ballets/SF.

Men Dancing XV takes place June 4 through 6, Thursday through Saturday at 8pm in the Cowell Theater. Tickets for the Thursday and Saturday shows are $10 to $27. Friday night's performance is a benefit for the Until There's A Cure Foundation. Tickets are $35 to $52. For information, call (408) 293-5665.

IS THERE AN EDEN?

Joanne Greenberg

An aging southern belle and a young girl's summer fantasy figure in two very different short stories brought to the stage by Word For Word. The literary theater company focuses on the theme of loss and innocence in "A Night in Eden."

Ellen Gilchrist's There's A Garden of Eden is the story of Alisha Terrebone, a woman whose life has been marked by beauty and wealth, but who has little to show for it. Lonely and bored, she sits on her bed remembering the days when she was "the most beautiful woman in the state of Louisiana," wooed by the most eligible men of her time. When the possibility of a dalliance with a young carpenter presents itself, she sets out with the same shortsighted illusions that have led her to devote her life "to love instead of wisdom."

The stage adaptation is directed by Mary Coleman, whose previous Word For Word credits include A Child's Christmas in Wales, Xingu, and The Most Girl Part of You.

Joanne Greenberg's A Passion of Eden, directed by Pam McDaniel, is a story of discovery and disillusionment—of growing up. Spending the summer pretending to be a tree in her backyard, the young protagonist observes the lives of her family's servants. As she follows their hopes, dreams, and unrequited passions, she learns that life can sometimes be cruel and unkind. By the end of the summer, she knows what it is to taste the bitter fruit of the Tree of Knowledge.

The one-night event is a fundraiser for Word For Word's 5th Anniversary Festival, which takes place at Magic Theatre July 29 through August 16. Since its inception, Word For Word's mission has been to present contemporary and classical fiction in stage format while remaining faithful to every single word of the original text. This unique approach to theater has been applied to works by Barbara Kingsolver, Dylan Thomas, Grace Paley, Virginia Woolf, Julia Alvarez, and more than a dozen other authors.

"A Night in Eden" takes place June 15, Monday at 7:30pm in the Cowell Theater. Admission is $35, $60 including a reception for the authors. For information, call 543-9505.

BEYOND REDEMPTION

A motley crew of petty criminals, drunks, and down-and-outers populates Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Lanford Wilson's Balm in Gilead, presented by San Francisco's Encore Theatre. This story of the skid-row milieu of Manhattan's Upper West Side in the 1960s features a cast of 25 misfits going through the motions of their dreary lives: living, loving, and—especially—losing.

In this play with no real plot, where characters are marked more by inaction than action, Wilson cuts open the underbelly of society, like doing an autopsy on a half-dead patient. What ends up on the examination table is a hodge-podge group of pushers, whores, junkies, pimps and drag queens—the outcasts and losers of their society. As they wander in and out of the coffee house they call home, as they talk and banter while rarely interacting, we get a sense of their frailty, their dreams (or lack of dreams), their fears, their search for escape from a meaningless existence into meaningless sex and drugs.

We meet these urban exiles just long enough to get to know each one a little bit, but if there are any central characters, they are Joe and Darlene, a failed drug dealer and a naive newcomer whose brief love affair is doomed by the surroundings they inhabit. Still, it is Darlene who alone among the gang finds time to dream; and it is Joe who at least tries to free himself—with drastic consequences—from the web of pushers and criminals keeping him down in the gutter. None of the other characters takes such grand risks. In the end, after all the talking and singing and drinking, almost nothing has changed.

Balm in Gilead premiered in the winter of 1965 at New York's Cafe La Mama Experimental Theatre Club. In the intervening years, Wilson has written over a dozen plays, including The Hot-l Baltimore, The Mound Builders, and Talley & Son. In 1980 he received the Pulitzer Prize for Drama for Talley's Folly, his dissertation on the secrets and crushing expectations of the Middle American aristocracy.

Encore Theatre, now enjoying its ninth season, was founded by alumni and associates of the American Conservatory Theater as an outlet for innovative and experimental plays. Today, the company focuses on contemporary and classical drama that fosters social awareness, examines ethics and morality, clarifies current issues, and encourages within the audience the feeling of belonging to a greater community. Past productions include Enemies by Maxim Gorky, Pericles by William Shakespeare, All Night Long by John O'Keefe, and A Man's A Man by Bertolt Brecht.

Balm in Gilead runs June 19 through July 13, Friday, Saturday, and Monday at 8:30pm, Sunday at 7pm at the Magic Theatre in Landmark Building D. There is no show July 4; an extra show is held July 2, Thursday at 8:30pm. Tickets are $18 Fridays, $20 Saturdays, $15 Sundays, and $12 Mondays and July 2. For information, call the Fort Mason Ticket Service, 441-FMTS.

A NEW CHIEF AT THE MAGIC

Getting back to its roots, Magic Theatre has hired Larry Eilenberg to be its new Artistic Director. A longtime Magic contributor, Eilenberg replaces Mame Hunt, who is leaving to be Associate Artistic Director at Seattle's A Contemporary Theatre. With several years' experience working at the Magic as dramaturg and Artistic Director during the theater's highly successful 1992-93 season, Eilenberg was an easy choice to continue the theater's devotion to emerging as well as established playwrights.

Over the years, Eilenberg helped bring several important and critically-acclaimed plays to the stage, including Joseph Chaiken's Utterances in the Firmament, Paula Vogel's Substance of Fire, and Mame Hunt's Unquestioned Integrity: The Hill-Thomas Hearings. He was a founding member of San Francisco's New Vaudeville Festival, and has worked in television and radio.

Since its inception three decades ago in a Berkeley bar, Magic Theatre has sought to be on the forefront of contemporary theatre. Playwright Sam Shepard premiered many of his plays here, actors Danny Glover and Peter Coyote are Magic alumni, and the Magic continues to seek out new talent to introduce to the public.

As the curtain falls on Magic Theatre's 30th anniversary season, Eilenberg's task will be to steer the Magic into the next decade. The season's final play, David Rabe's A Question of Mercy, runs through June 28. For information, call 441-8001; for tickets, call the Fort Mason Ticket Service, 441-FMTS.

HAVE A FORT MASON SUMMER

Environmental Traveling Companions

When the moist air of the tropics comes blowing in from Hawai'i, crashing—as it inevitably must—into the mountains of the California coast; when that warm breath cools to a solid stew and the sound of foghorns skims the waters of the Bay, then summer has arrived in San Francisco. This is the season when a blanket of gray descends on the western districts and locals escape to the sunny skies of Napa or Tahoe or (god forbid!) Los Angeles, leaving only the tourists to freeze, alone and bewildered.

Luckily, many of the groups at Fort Mason Center offer diversions from those lazy, very hazy days of summer. And since summer is the time when bored children drive their parents nuts, the many courses offered at Fort Mason Center are like a ray of sunshine cutting through the fog. Children will learn and have fun at the same time; adults and families can take organized trips, even if only for a day.

Environmental Traveling Companions
Outdoor adventuring should not be limited to the well-off or the able-bodied. That is the philosophy behind ETC's efforts to provide camping, kayaking, and other outdoor experiences for disabled and disadvantaged people. This summer, to raise funds for its programs, ETC is sponsoring a seven-day (June 28 through July 6) kayaking expedition through British Columbia's Broken Islands. The trip's cost of $850 helps support ETC's many programs. For information about the fundraising or any other trip, call 474-7662.

Oceanic Society
Every weekend in summer, the Oceanic Society offers boat excursions to the craggy Farallon Islands off the coast of San Francisco. This national wildlife refuge harbors many marine birds and mammals. The surrounding waters are home to seals, dolphins, humpback whales, and the occasional blue whale, the largest animal that has ever lived on earth or in water. Excursions cost $60 or $65, and leave every Saturday and Sunday (plus the occasional Monday or Friday) at 8:30am. Return time is approximately 4:30pm. Reservations are required; call 474-3385.

Sailing Education Adventures
Want to learn to tie knots, rig a boat, trim sails, tack, dock, and work with the wind? Adults and children can receive affordable hands-on training in sailing and boating from Sailing Education Adventures. SEA offers ongoing beginner and intermediate classes, plus summer sail camps for children ages 11 to 16. Camp fees are $325 for a two-week intensive course, $90 for a one-week race camp, and $100 for a one-week mini-camp for ages 8 to 10. For information, call 775-8779.

Blue Bear School of American Music
Children and adults can take up a new instrument or improve their existing skills at Blue Bear School of American Music. Blue Bear offers individual and group classes in Jazz, Blues, and Folk, plus other American musical styles. Vocal training is also available. For information, call 673-3600.

City College of San Francisco
CCSF's Fort Mason Art Campus offers courses in drawing, painting, photography, writing, printmaking, and more. Credit, non-credit, and continuing education classes are available. Summer session starts June 16; registration is open through the first week of classes. For information, call 861-1840.

San Francisco Children's Art Center
The Art Center is celebrating 20 years of fostering children's sense of self through the arts. Courses for kids aged 27 months to 10 years are offered in painting, sculpture, drawing, and puppetmaking. Tuition is $95 to $145 per half-session, or $175 to $275 for the whole summer. Special four-day workshops for 5- to 10-year olds cost $110. The Center also organizes off-site programs throughout San Francisco and offers Art Birthday Parties for kids every Sunday from 11am to 2pm. Summer session is from June 8 through August 29. For information, call 771-0292.

Young Performers Theatre
Another place kids can learn cultural and artistic skills is Young Performers Theatre. Every month, YPT puts on staged versions of popular children's stories like Alice in Wonderland or Winnie the Pooh. Budding young actors who wish to participate in such productions can take one of YPT's many acting classes. The first of two four-week summer conservatories starts June 22; for information, call 346-5550.

Many other groups offer short-term, long-term, and drop-in courses to stimulate mind and body. For further information, see the "Classes and Workshops" page in this calendar.

SWING, SWING, SWING!

Wednesday night is swing night at Fort Mason Center, when instructor Diana Castillo offers lessons in the dance style of the 1930s and '40s that has been enjoying a newfound popularity in clubs throughout San Francisco.

With the recent revival of couples dancing, all kinds of clubs have started offering lessons and swing nights. Diana has 20 years of experience, and her classes offer a relaxed, informal setting. The class focuses on combining steps to create smooth dance movements. Best of all, you don't need a partner; just show up and get ready to learn some moves.

Starting in June, Diana introduces a new session especially for young people interested in taking up this popular dance. "Under 21 Swing Dance for Youth" is geared especially toward younger people interested in swing dance and seeking to learn with others in their age range.

Adult Beginner and Intemerdiate classes teach the boogie woogie, jump, jive, Lindy Jitterbug, the Charleston and all kinds of other cool moves.

Swing/Jitterbug classes take place every Wednesday in Landmark Building C, with Under 21 classes at 6pm, Adult Beginning Swing at 7pm, and Intermediate Swing at 8pm. Classes cost $38 for four weeks. For information, call (510) 748-6685.

HOLISTIC MEDICINE AND HEALING

The Goethe Institut, San Francisco's center for German culture, presents "Taking The Cure: The German Roots of Holistic Healing." Believers and skeptics alike are invited to attend and learn about alternative medicine.

Demonstration of Laban Technique

Many contemporary holistic and homeopathic therapies originated in Germany, Austria, and Switzerland more than a century ago as cures for common ailments and for maintaining general wellness. Among these are Sensory Awareness, Gestalt-Therapy, Trigger Point, Myofascial Therapy, and the Rosen Movement. Researchers in the field include Otto Buchinger, Wilhelm Reich, and Samuel Hahnemann. A series of workshops demonstrates these and other methods. Books and healing aids are available for purchase.

The symposium starts Friday with "Medicine and the Mind." Moderator M. Michael Thaler, Professor of Pediatrics at UCSF, leads a panel discussion on the need for a new kind of health care-integrated medicine. Panelists include Ellen Hughes from the UCSF Center for Integrated Medicine; Kenn Burrows of San Francisco State's Holistic Health Resource Center; author Adam Burke; and M.K.H. Elies, who lectures in Homeopathic Medicine at Heinrich Heine University in Düsseldorf, Germany.

The following day, author Mel Gordon, physician Michael Cantwell, lecturer and practitioner Dana Ullman, and Dr. Elies convene for "Homeopathic Medicine: Less is More," a discussion of homeopathy's relationship to conventional medicine.

"Taking the Cure: The German Roots of Holistic Healing" takes place June 19 through 21, Friday from 7 to 9pm, and Saturday and Sunday from 10:30am to 4pm. Saturday workshops take place from 10:30am to noon and 2:30 to 4pm; Saturday's lecture takes place from noon to 2pm. Sunday workshops are offered from 10:30am to noon and 12:30 to 2pm. Lectures take place in the Conference Center, Landmark Building A; workshops are held in Buildings C and D. Admission to the entire event is free. For information, call 391-0370.

LOOKING FOR THE GODDESS

The discoveries made by archaeomythologist Marija Gimbutas (1921-1994) have been compared to Schliemann's discovery of Troy or the deciphering of Egyptian pyramids. But her conclusions—that prehistoric European societies were matriarchal and goddess-worshipping—remain controversial because they challenge traditional assumptions about the origins of Western civilization.

The Women's Spirituality Program at the California Institute of Integral Studies honors the career and work of Gimbutas with "From the Realm of the Ancestors," three days of lectures, discussions, and music.

Topics discussed include "The Archaeomythology of Marija Gimbutas," "Mother Africa and the Black Madonna," and "Rituals of the Dark Goddess in India." Rose Wognum Frances presents "Wise Hands: Art-Making as a Source of Mythic Understanding," Riane Eisler discusses "Recovering Our Past, Reclaiming Our Future," and Beth Hensprenger talks on "Sacred Bread: Eat This in Remembrance of Me."

Music, dance, poetry, and an art exhibit entitled "The Language of the Goddess" accompany the event. Saturday evening features a performance by the Anima Mundi Dance Company.

"From the Realm of the Ancestors" takes place June 12 through 14, Friday from 7 to 10pm, Saturday from 9am to 10pm, and Sunday from 9:30am to 5:30pm in the Cowell Theater. Cost is $175. For information, call 674-5500, extension 241.

A PERSONAL VISION

The San Francisco Craft and Folk Art Museum starts the summer season with an exhibit documenting four decades of work by a local metal artist, and a look into the world of two California portraitists.

June Schwarcz: Forty Years/Forty Pieces
The innovations and achievements pioneered by Schwarcz have made her famous in the world of metal enameling. Her copper enameling process is so complex and time-consuming, she only finishes fifteen pieces each year.

Starting with thin foil, Schwarcz folds, creases, and sews the copper into the shape she wants. The piece is then strengthened through electroplating and, after being sprayed with adhesive, is covered with a fine layer of enamel powder. The final product is then fired several times, producing an abstract blending of color.

Schwarcz, a resident of Sausalito, studied art and design in the late 1930s and early '40s, and has been working with metal since the mid-1950s.

With her technique, she has left her mark on the world of enamelware, thrusting it into the arena of fine contemporary art. Schwarcz herself says that, had she been a painter, she would have liked to have painted like Mark Rothko.

The exhibit's opening falls on the same day as the artist's 80th birthday. After closing in August it travels to the Honolulu Academy of Arts and the American Craft Museum in New York.

Ted Gordon "Aborigine of the Dream World"

Face to Face: Portraits by Craig Budde and Ted Gordon
Strange and surreal images appear in the works of two self-taught California artists, whose distinctive portraits are a form of personal revelation.

Ted Gordon, a former medical clerk at the Presidio's Letterman Hospital, now retired in Laguna Beach, began drawing "doodles" in 1951. Over the years, his pen, ink, and colored pencil drawings evolved into portraits of human heads with large, smiling faces and oversized, slightly unsettling eyes. Gordon fills the outlines of the heads with symmetrical patterns and spirals that suggest a compulsive attention to texturing and detail.

A compulsive need to create also figures in the work of Craig Budde. Over 21 years, Budde created more than 150 carvings of the same portrait. Each one contains the same features—straight nose, suggestive eyes, friendly smile. The woman in these portraits (Budde himself has no idea who the inspiration is) becomes a reflection of a fantasy existence, someone always wearing different hats, hairstyles, and jewelry, around whom one can create a story of one's liking.

"June Schwarcz" and "Face to Face" open June 6 and run through August 9 at the San Francisco Craft and Folk Art Museum in Landmark Building A. A public reception takes place June 10, Wednesday from 5 to 7pm. The museum is open Tuesday through Friday and Sunday from 11am to 5pm, Saturday from 10am to 5pm. Admission is $3, $5 for families, $1 for seniors and students. Admission is free Saturday mornings from 10am to noon. Every first Wednesday of the month, all museums at Fort Mason Center are free and open until 7pm. First Wednesdays for these two exhibits are July 1 and August 5. For information, call 775-0990.

SFMOMA ART SALE

The San Francisco Museum of Modern Art Rental Gallery holds its annual fundraising sale of artworks from its stable of over 1,000 artists. The five-day sale helps support the Rental Gallery's outreach programs, the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art, and the artists themselves. This year's sale is re-stocked daily and features extended hours, daily selections of unframed works on paper, and low prices on painting, sculpture, and photography. Many pieces are available for half the usual price.

The Rental Gallery is dedicated to giving emerging, mid-career, and established artists an outlet to bring their works to a wide audience. Patrons may buy pieces or rent them monthly. This unique arrangement gives prospective buyers the chance to rotate paintings or sculptures in their home or office, while the artist gains exposure through wider circulation. In addition, monthly exhibits at the gallery provide an excellent venue for Bay Area and Northern California artists.

The Fifth Annual Artists' Warehouse Sale takes place June 3 through 7, Wednesday from 5 to 9pm, Thursday and Friday from noon to 8pm, Saturday from noon to 5:30pm, and Sunday from noon to 4pm. Wednesday night's reception features live music and refreshments. The San Francisco Museum of Modern Art Rental Gallery is located in Landmark Building A. For information, call 441-4777.
